The world is at a crossroads. Now is the moment to reconfigure our notions of time to reveal alternative ways of thinking and being for the future. In Close Encounters: The Next 500 Years, Indigenous artists imagine the future within the context of present experiences and past histories. By radically reconsidering encounter narratives between native and non-native people, Indigenous prophecies, possible utopias and apocalypses, this exhibition proposes intriguing possibilities for the next 500 years. “We all in different measure have carved out the future,” observes Hopi photographer and filmmaker Victor Masayesva in his book Husk of Time. “We are all clairvoyants, soothsayers, prophets, knowingly assuming our predictions.”

Close Encounters brings together over 30 Indigenous artists from across Canada, the United States, South America, Europe, Australia and New Zealand, including newly commissioned work from Rebecca Belmore, Faye HeavyShield, Kent Monkman and Edward Poitras. Jimmie Durham’s long-term sculptural work Pole to Mark the Centre of the World (at Winnipeg) challenges widely held ideas surrounding space and location, while James Luna’s poignant installation Spirits of Virtue and Evil Await My Ascension addresses issues of ritual and the passing of time. Close Encounters showcases artists and artworks that collectively invent provocative futures from a diversity of perspectives and practices.

With its myriad histories, trajectories, tensions, collisions, and self-image(s), the city of Winnipeg offers an intriguing juxtaposition for these artistic mediations. Close Encounters: The Next 500 Years presents international Indigenous perspectives in a city that in many ways also epitomizes the future of Aboriginal people in Canada. Works in multiple venues throughout the city will serve as catalysts to invent different ways of thinking, acting, and being in the world of our shared future. At this pivotal moment in time, Close Encounters invites engagement with the speculative, the prophetic and the unknown.
Through the Cultural Capitals of Canada national program, the Department of Canadian Heritage named Winnipeg the Cultural Capital of Canada for 2010. On behalf of the City of Winnipeg, the Winnipeg Arts Council planned a year of extraordinary cultural events and arts programming. Activities and events were designed to harness the many benefits of arts and culture in community life and celebrate our artists as unique and vital to the fabric of Canadian culture. The River Barge Festival, The BIG DANCE on Broadway and City Stories with the Winnipeg Tarot Company were all events planned with the vision of ARTS FOR ALL that brought the arts into the lives of thousands of Winnipeggers in the year 2010. Close Encounters: The Next 500 Years is a unique and remarkable exhibition that will continue to enrich the lives of our citizens and help us carry this important designation well into 2011.

The mission of Winnipeg Cultural Capital of Canada 2010 is to ensure that all people have access to the arts, are able to participate in the arts, and value and are enriched by the arts. In other words: ARTS FOR ALL. Close Encounters is a materialization of that vision, providing a massive multi-site exhibition of groundbreaking work free of charge to the public, and providing a platform to present work by leading Indigenous artists.

As an artist, KC Adams focuses on the investigation of the relationship between nature (the living) and technology (progress). Her work includes sculpture, installation, drawing, painting, photography, ceramics, printmaking and kinetic art. KC Adams has had several solo exhibitions, most recently Cyborg Hybrids at the Odd Gallery in Dawson City and Modern Fuel in Kingston. She has also been featured in numerous group exhibitions; Cyborg Living Space II, The Language of Intercession at the OBORO Gallery in Montreal, Cyborg Hybrids at the PHOTOQUIA: Biennale des images du monde in Paris. She has participated in residencies at The Banff Centre, the Confederation Art Centre in Charlottetown, PEI and the Annex Gallery in Winnipeg. She has received several grants and awards from Winnipeg Arts Council, Manitoba Arts Council and Canada Council for the Arts. Twenty pieces from the Cyborg Hybrid series are in the permanent collection of the National Art Gallery in Ottawa. She graduated from Concordia University with a BFA and is based in Winnipeg.

Maria Thereza Alves is a Brazilian artist living in Europe who researches social and cultural phenomena, working particularly with situations that question social circumstances. Her work examines what we think we know, who we think we are, and the realities of where and how we actually are at this time. Alves has recently exhibited in the Guangzhou Triennal, Manifesta in Trento, the Prague Biennial, the Athens Biennial and the Lyon Biennial where she received the Francophonic prize.

Shuvina Ashoona

Shuvina Ashoona was born in Cape Dorset, NU, and began drawing in 1995. Ashoona’s work was first included in the Cape Dorset annual print collection in 1997, with two small dry-point etchings entitled Interior (1997-33) and Settlement (1997-34). Since then, she has become a committed and prolific graphic artist, working daily in the Kinngait Studios. Her impressive sensibility for the landscape around the community of Cape Dorset has attracted the attention of several notable private galleries, as well as public institutions such as the McMichael Canadian Collection’s 1999 exhibition entitled Three Women, Three Generations. Her most recent exhibition presented her work alongside Toronto-based artist Shari Boyle at the Justina Barnicke Gallery at Hart House in Toronto. Ashoona is also the subject of a documentary art film to be released next year.

Mary Anne Barkhouse

Mary Anne Barkhouse was born in Vancouver, BC, and belongs to the Nimpkish band, Kwakwutl First Nation. She is a descendant of a long line of internationally recognized artists that includes Ellen Neel, Mungo Martin and Charlie James. She graduated with honours from the Ontario College of Art and Design and has exhibited widely across Canada. Working with a variety of materials and processes, Barkhouse examines environmental concerns and Indigenous culture through the use of animal imagery. A member of the Royal Canadian Academy of Art, Barkhouse’s work can be found in the collections of the Art Bank of Canada, the Banff Centre and the Department of Indian and Northern Affairs. In addition she has public art installations at Thunder Bay Art Gallery, University of Western Ontario in London, McMichael Canadian Art Collection in Kleinburg, Robert McLaughlin Gallery in Oshawa, MacDonald Stewart Art Centre in Guelph and the Millennium Walkway in Peterborough.

Michael Belmore

Michael Belmore is a member of the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts and graduated with an A.O.C.A. in sculpture/installation from Ontario College of Art & Design in 1994. Michael works in a variety of media including plastic, metal and wood. He also works with graphite on matte film, which he incorporates into large format light boxes. His work has been exhibited nationally and internationally and is represented in the permanent collections at the Indian Art Centre in Gatineau, the McMichael Canadian Art Collection in Kleinburg, Thunder Bay Art Gallery, Agnes Etherington Art Gallery in Kingston, and in numerous private collections. He has also shown at several artist-run centres and collectives across Canada and has created site-specific installations for Thunder Bay Art Gallery and the City of Peterborough.

Rebecca Belmore

Born in Upsala, ON, Rebecca Belmore is an artist currently living in Vancouver, BC. She attended the Ontario College of Art and Design and is internationally recognized for her performance and installation art. Since 1987, her multi-disciplinary work has addressed history, place and identity through the media of sculpture, installation, video and performance. Belmore was Canada’s official representative at the 2005 Venice Biennale. Her work has appeared in numerous exhibitions both nationally and internationally including two solo touring exhibitions, The Named and the Unnamed, Morris and Helen Belkin Art Gallery in Vancouver (2002); and 33 Pieces, Blackwood Gallery, University of Toronto at Mississauga (2001). Her group exhibitions include Houseguests, Art Gallery of Ontario (2001); Longing and Belonging: From the Faraway Nearby, SITE Santa Fe in New Mexico (1995); Land, Spirit, Power, National Gallery of Canada (1992); and Creation or Death: We Will Win, at the Havana Biennial, Cuba (1991).
Colleen Cutschall's tribal affiliation is Oglala-Sicangu Lakota, Pine Ridge, SD. She received her BFA from Barat College, Lake Forest, IL in 1973 and a MS Ed, from Black Hills University, Spearfish, SD. She currently teaches at Brandon University in the Visual Arts Department on Native Issues. Her solo exhibitions include Voice in the Blood, organized by the Art Gallery of Southwestern Manitoba, which toured to Oscar Howe Art Center in Mitchell, SD; Dakota Gallery in Sioux Falls, SD; Minnesota State University Moorhead; Thunder Bay Art Gallery; MacKenzie Art Gallery in Regina; North Dakota Heritage Center in Bismarck, ND; Art Gallery of Mississauga, and Wauskegewin Heritage Center Art Gallery in Saskatoon. Her work is represented in the collections of the Manitoba Arts Council Art Bank, The Canada Council Visual Art Bank, the Government of Manitoba, the MacKenzie Art Gallery, Indian and Northern Affairs Canada, the Oscar Howe Art Center, the Sioux Indian Museum and the Winnipeg Art Gallery.

Wally Dion lives and works as an artist in Saskatoon, SK. Dion is a member of Yellow Quill First Nation (Salteaux). In 2004, Dion graduated from the University of Saskatchewan with a BFA. His work has typically consisted of large scale painted portraiture sometimes working with themes including social-realism and First Nations class struggles in modern Canadian life, specifically in Saskatchewan. More recent work has involved the use of recycled computer circuit boards for large sculptural pieces. As an active artist, Dion has been met with positive support from both the local and national art communities. He is the recipient of numerous grants from agencies including the Canada Council for the Arts and the Saskatchewan Arts Board. In the summer of 2008, Dion held his first major solo exhibition: Wally Dion at the MacKenzie Art Gallery in Regina. His work has been included in several group shows: Flatlanders (2008), Honouring Tradition (2008) and No Word for Good Bye (2006). His work can be found in several prominent public collections including the Saskatchewan Arts Board, Canadian Museum of Civilization, Canada Council Art Bank and the MacKenzie Art Gallery.

Rosalie Favell was born and raised in Winnipeg, MB. Much of her work draws upon both her family history and Métis (Cree/English) heritage that goes back many generations in Winnipeg and surrounding areas. She uses many sources to present a complex self-portrait of her experiences as a contemporary Aboriginal woman. In addition to scouring her family albums for visual material, she finds inspiration in popular culture and has incorporated a number of warrior women from television series and movies into her works. Her recent work undertakes a spiritual quest, drawing upon a number of religions and beliefs. In 1998, she earned an MFA from the University of New Mexico, in Albuquerque.

Brett Graham
NZL

Brett Graham is one of New Zealand’s most exciting and accomplished sculptors, highly regarded for his ability to abstract complex historical and cultural ideas into formally strong and beautiful sculptural forms. Graham places strong emphasis on materiality and surface with the formal simplicity of his sculptural pieces and predominant use of wood and stone. Graham’s work engages in a dual dialogue of Maori and European histories whilst adhering to the modernist emphasis on form and material quality. Although his works may not directly invoke Maori sculptural tradition, they nonetheless speak of that tradition in their titles and concept. His work is accessible on an aesthetic, personal and historical level, enabling both the object and viewer to occupy a common ground. In the last decade Graham has exhibited extensively, locally and internationally, as well as being regarded as a leading authority on contemporary Maori sculpture.

Whether in discrete sculptural forms or large-scale installation works, Jonathan Jones activates spaces between light and its absence, between the material and ephemeral - spaces that are also distances to be traversed between cultures, between history and memory, between past, present and future. Jonathan Jones is a Sydney-based artist of Kamilaroi/Wiradjuri heritage. His major solo exhibitions include Jonathan Jones: untitled [the tyranny of distance] at Sherman Contemporary Art Foundation in Sydney (2008) and Jonathan Jones at Newcastle Region Art Gallery (2007). His work has been included in a range of group exhibitions both around Australia and internationally, including NEW08 at Australian Centre for Contemporary Art in Melbourne (2008), Adventures with form in space at Art Gallery of NSW (2006), Primavera at Museum of Contemporary Art in Sydney (2003) and the 2002 Adelaide Biennal of Australian Art. Jones was recipient of the Xstrata Coal Biennial of Australian Art. Jones has exhibited extensively in Canada and internationally, in venues including the Tate Modern in London, the New Museum in New York, the Biennale of Sydney, the Gwangju Biennal in South Korea, and Seccesion in Vienna. From 2005 to 2007, he was the subject of a major exhibition organized by the Vancouver Art Gallery that traveled to New York, Montreal, Rotterdam, and Munich. His work is included in the collections of the National Gallery of Canada, the Art Gallery of Ontario, the Vancouver Art Gallery, and the National Museum of the American Indian, as well as numerous private collections.

JAMES LUNA

USA

James Luna is a Luiseno Indian who resides on the La Jolla Indian Reservation. He holds a BFA from the University of California, Irvine and an MS in Counseling from San Diego State University. Luna has stated that "art work in the media of performance and installation offers an opportunity like no other for Native people to express themselves without compromise in the Indian traditional art forms of ceremony, dance, oral traditions and contemporary thought." His installations have been described as transforming gallery spaces into battlefields, where the audience is confronted with the nature of cultural identity, tensions generated by cultural isolation and dangers of cultural misinterpretation – all from a Native perspective. He addresses the mythology of what it means to be "Indian" in contemporary American society and exposes the hypocrisy of the dominant society, which trivializes Indian people as romantic stereotypes. Luna has exhibited across the US, Canada, Japan and the UK.

Kavavaow Mannonee was born in Brandon, MB and now lives with his wife and son Peter in Cape Dorset, NU. Kavavaow has demonstrated a range of stylistic abilities over the years - from the very literal to the more expressive. His thematic concerns include depictions of Inuit legends and mythology, Arctic wildlife and an interest in some of the more contemporary aspects of Inuit life. Mannonee is the latest among the second generation to attract critical acclaim from the contemporary arts audience in the south. He and Shuvini Ashoona have been profiled, along with Nick Sikkuark of Gjoa Haven, in the arts magazine Border Crossings. He traveled to Toronto in June of last year for his first solo exhibition of original drawings, and this year to Vancouver for another exhibition featuring his contemporary work. For several years Mannonee has worked for the Kinngait Studios as a printmaker, first in the lithography studio and more recently in the stone cut studio. He is an accomplished and precise printmaker who enjoys the opportunity to demonstrate printmaking techniques to young artists and visitors to the studio.

Tracey Moffatt is an Australian photographer and filmmaker. Her work reflects her views on Aboriginality and the misconceptions about and representations of her people in art and cinema. Her earliest photographic work, a series of black-and-white portraits of members of the Aboriginal and Islander Dance Company, was entitled Some Lads (1986), and was a subtly subversive take on the 19th-century ethnographic photograph. Using a documentary style, Moffatt often draws on images from film and television made during her youth in the 1960s and 1970s as an adopted half-Aboriginal child in a white family. She carefully stages images to reflect familiar tableaux, but with a twist.

Performance artist, new media artist, filmmaker, writer, curator and educator, Archer Pechawis was born in Alert Bay, on Vancouver Island. He has been a practicing artist since 1984 with particular interest in the intersection of Plains Cree culture and digital technology, often merging “traditional” objects such as hand drums with “forward engineered” devices such as Mac PowerBooks. His work has been exhibited across Canada and featured in publications such as Fuse Magazine and Canadian Theatre Review. Archer has been the recipient of many Canada Council for the Arts and British Columbia Arts awards and was the recipient of the Best New Media award at the imagineNATIVE Film + Media Arts Festival in 2007. Archer also works extensively with Native youth as part of his art practice, teaching performance and digital media for the Indigenous Media Arts Group and in the public school system. Of Cree and European ancestry, he is a member of Mistawasis First Nation, Saskatchewan, and currently resides in Vancouver, BC.

Pudlo Pudlat

Pudlo Pudlat lived as a hunter and made his home in small camps along the southwest coast of Baffin Island until the early 1960s. It was upon moving to Kiaktuuq during a bout of tuberculosis, that Pudlat met James Houston, who encouraged his talent. Pudlat then began a practice that would come to encompass over 4,500 drawings, 180 prints and several sculptures, many of which can be found in the Cape Dorset Graphics Collection. Pudlat, due to his illness, flew south, as well as to other areas in the north, on several occasions. The objects he encountered during his travels are prominent in his subject matter.

All his films have a close connection with Sámi culture. His breakthrough short film Let’s Dance! (1991) is a humorous story about a Sámi boy going to his first dance. Simma’s feature films include The Minister of State (1997) and The Legacy of the Tundra (1995), which explores the psychological dimensions of reindeer herding Sámi. His documentary work includes the celebrated Give Us Our Skeletons! (1999) about Sámi activist Nils Somby and his quest for the repatriation of the human remains of Sámi ancestors.</td>

<td>Skawennati</td>
<td>CAN</td>
<td>Skawennati is an artist, writer and independent curator who is currently focused on creating projects for the World Wide Web, which she believes, is an extraordinary art delivery system. Projects have included CyberPowWow, a virtual gallery and chat space; Imagining Indians in the 25th Century, a web-based paper doll/time-travel journal; and her current obsession, 80 Minutes, 80 Movies, 80s Music. In 1994, Skawennati co-founded nation to nation, a First Nations artist collective. As Curatorial Resident at the Walter Phillips Gallery at the Banff Centre, she mounted Blanket Statements, an exhibition of art quilts, and The People’s Plastic Princess, a survey of more than thirty years of Barbie art. During her two-year stay in San Francisco, Skawennati produced arts alliance Laboratory’s monthly CRIT (Critical Reviews of Interactive Technology) nights and co-curated New Fangle for GenArtSF. Her articles have appeared in Fuse Magazine, Horizon Zero and Mix Magazine.</td>

Marie Watt is a multidisciplinary artist who lives and works in Portland, OR. Born to the son of Wyoming ranchers and a daughter of the Turtle Clan of the Seneca Nation (Iroquois/Haudenosaunee) Watt identifies herself as “half Cowboy and half Indian.” Formally, her work draws from Indigenous design principles, oral tradition, personal experience and Western art history. Her approach to art-making is shaped by the protofeminism of Iroquois matrilineal custom, political work by Native artists in the 60s, a discourse on multiculturalism, as well as Abstract Expressionism and Pop Art. Like Jasper Johns, she is interested in “things that the mind already knows.” Unlike the Pop artists, she uses a vocabulary of natural materials (stone, cornhusks, wool, cedar) and forms (blankets, pillows, bridges) that are universal to human experience (though not uniquely American) and noncommercial in character.

Linus Woods is a Dakota/Ojibway artist from the Long Plain First Nation in Southern Manitoba, where he was born. While he has taken a few art and Native studies courses at Brandon University, and has studied with artists such as Jane Ash Poitras, he is largely self-taught. Woods sees his paintings as expressions and extensions of his spiritual journey. His art; acrylic, oil and collage on canvas; are subtle works featuring pastel pallets and geometric shapes and often include collaged images. Linus Woods is a winner of the Peace Hills Trust Company Art Competition and his work is in the Peace Hills Trust Collection and in a number of other collections including Winnipeg Children’s Hospital, Long Plain First Nation, Curtis Joony Productions, Brandon University and Mae Moore.

Lawrence Paul Yuxweluptun graduated from the Emily Carr University of Art + Design in 1983 with an honours degree in painting. Yuxweluptun’s strategy is to document and promote change in contemporary Indigenous history in large-scale paintings (from 54.2 x 34.7cm to 233.7 x 200.7cm), using Coast Salish cosmology, Northwest Coast formal design elements, and the Western landscape tradition. His painted works explore political, environmental and cultural issues. His personal and socio-political experiences enhance this practice of documentation. Yuxweluptun’s work has been included in numerous international group and solo exhibitions, such as INDIGENA: Contemporary Native Perspectives in (1992). He was the recipient of the Vancouver Institute for the Visual Arts (VIVA) award in 1998.
